

BEST MED NSTO & DestiMED PLUS Policy Conference

For an enlightened governance of the tourism towards a more resilient sector respecting the environment and the host communities of the Mediterranean territories

21st June 2022

Rome & online

Introduction

On 21st June 2022, BEST MED and DestiMED PLUS Interreg MED projects will organize a joint event to reflect on the implementation and governance of the Mediterranean Network of Sustainable Tourism Observatories (NSTO) and on the approval of a Mediterranean Ecotourism Policy Roadmap by public authorities and notably the European institutions.

Indeed, a Policy Conference will be held to gather some key tourism actors from the private and public sectors and high-level participants from world and EU tourism organization, the European Institutions. It will mainly address the digital and greener transition of the tourism ecosystem.

Indeed, the members of the NSTO, which gather Mediterranean Tourism Observatories will discuss their needs in terms of data collection, identification, analysis, and use. The NSTO will also be presented as an innovative network that can be complementary to the existing UNWTO International Network of Sustainable Tourism Observatories by gathering more local observatories (regional ones) and thus could serve the regional policy makers in planning their tourism activities in order to make the sector more sustainable, respectful of their territory and population.

The green transition will also be addressed with the promotion of the governance of ecotourism and especially the integration of conservation and tourism policies in the Mediterranean territories. A Mediterranean Ecotourism Policy roadmap prepared by the Mediterranean Ecotourism Consortium will be presented.

After the presentation of the different initiatives, a debate will be opened in order to collect reactions from tourism stakeholders and in particular from high-level guests such as the European institutions and other key organisations. This will be a first step towards mainstreaming these two innovative initiatives as part of the implementation of the transition pathway of the tourism ecosystem in the Mediterranean.
